Afshar

Afshari have Turkish roots and played an important part in the Persian political landscape when the Safavids came to power in the 16th century. They live all around Iran, but mainly in Khuzestan, the Kerman area and also in Azerbaijan and in Khorasan.

This peculiar pair of small Afshari rugs do not comply to the tradition and avoids contrasting borders with a pattern of its own. The crossing of fine stripes creates a rather modern structure. The main pattern (boteh/parsley) is irregular (it shows the carpets were not manufactured in a workshop) and it has faded in several shades.
